I believe, along with many many others that the settlement in the Microsoft Anti-Trust case is unacceptable. It's a bad idea and doesn't do anything besides give Microsoft a tiny scolding, and ultimately enables them to become more embolden in their future actions.

They do their best to make it difficult to use any software, hardware or competitor to them's products intentionally, so that you'll think competitors inferior, or just give up and accept what you cannot change.

It's important you enable the change.
